

Adam Dinham

Adam Dinham is director of the Faiths & Civil Society Unit at Goldsmiths, University of London where he is Professor of Faith & Public Policy. His publications include Faiths, Public Policy and Civil Society: policies, problems and concepts in faith based public action (Palgrave Macmillan, 2009); Faith and Social Capital After the Debt Crisis (Palgrave Macmillan, 2012); “Welfare, Education and Religion” co-authored with Robert Jackson in Religion and Change in Modern Britain (Routledge, 2012) and “Religion in the Higher Education Market: The Case of Universities,” co-authored with Stephen Jones in England Higher Education Studies (2012).