

Bruce Grelle

Bruce Grelle presently is Professor and Director of the Religion and Public Education Project, Department of Comparative Religion and Humanities at California State University, Chico. Grelle's areas of teaching and interest are comparative and religious ethics, religion and politics, and religion and public education. His publications include "Defining and Promoting the Study of Religion in British and American Schools," in International Handbook of the Religious, Spiritual and Moral Dimensions in Education, Springer, Dordrecht, The Netherlands (2006); "The Place of Religious Studies in Warren Nord's Does God Make a Difference?" Religion & Education (38/1, 2011); "Preface" to Religion, Education, Dialogue and Conflict: Perspectives on Religious Education Research (Routledge, 2012); "Promoting Civic and Religious Literacy in Public Schools: The California 3 Rs Project," in Religion in the Schools: Negotiating the New Commons, (Roman & Littlefield Education, 2013); and "The First Amendment Consensus Approach to Teaching about Religion in U.S. Public Schools: Applications and Assessment" in Civility and Education in a World of Religious Pluralism (Routledge, 2013).